

Industry News

Published May 5th, 2020

The Canadian Academy of Audiology

Wavefront Centre Appoints New CEO

Vancouver – Wavefront Centre for Communication Accessibility announced today that, after an extensive nationwide search, its Board of Directors has appointed Christopher T. Sutton as its Chief Executive Officer, effective immediately. Christopher most recently held the position of National Executive Director of Canadian Hard of Hearing Association.

“We’re very fortunate to gain a leader with Christopher’s experience, talent and vision,” said Barbara M. Brown, Wavefront Centre’s President of the board of directors. “Today’s announcement is about advancing our organization’s growth. It’s about our future: establishing concrete relationships with our community and policymakers. It’s about advocating for change, a better change, synonymous with Bill C-81: An Accessible Canada Act, that ensures a barrier-free Canada.”

Christopher joins Wavefront Centre at a unique and opportune time. Christopher says, “Together, we will move forward in making Wavefront Centre the premier non-profit organization in Canada at the forefront in providing consultation, services, advocacy, and programs that enable Deaf and hard of hearing and hearing people achieve barrier-free communication accessibility everywhere.”

Established in 1956 and trusted for over 64 years, Wavefront Centre for Communication Accessibility (operating name for the Western Institute for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing) is a BC based, charitable non-profit organization. Wavefront Centre provides innovative services in the areas of Audiology, Counselling, Seniors Outreach, Sign Language Interpreting and Communication Devices to help deaf and hard of hearing clients achieve full communication accessibility. Wavefront Centre has received numerous accolades for excellence in client care and community service.

Wavefront Centre also announced that Grace Shyng, previously interim Executive Director, will assume an interim role as Special Advisor to the CEO. In this role, Grace will work with Christopher to ensure a smooth transition at the organization, working on various projects, and will continue to assist in the audiology department.

Tribute: Former BHI Director Joseph Rizzo

Joseph (Joe) J. Rizzo, the long-time former executive director of the Better Hearing Institute (BHI), passed away on February 23. He was 84. Rizzo was the first executive director of BHI and ran the Washington DC-based nonprofit association for 25 years.

Joe had a passion for hearing healthcare advocacy and running—he ran in over 100 marathons and always wore track shoes—and he often combined these two passions to become an irrepressible force for getting hearing care professionals and industry personnel together for BHI's "Run for Better Hearing" fundraising events. He even persuaded dozens of people in the industry to participate in the annual Grandma's Marathon in Duluth, Minn, including Gallaudet University Former-president Dr. I. King Jordan, running the 26-mile course along Lake Superior. He also organized 5K fun-run/walk events on the first day of many major hearing care conventions—and often drew rowdy and enthusiastic participants.

Rizzo always seemed to have a "can do" attitude and an infectious smile. His gregarious personality served him well when enlisting throngs of famous spokespeople for BHI. Throughout the 1970s, 1980s, and much of the 1990s, BHI enlisted more than 60 celebrities—including Bob Hope, Arnold Palmer, Leslie Nielsen, Richard Thomas, and Al Unser—to address the often-hidden problem of hearing loss. Through thousands of public service message (PSA) television and radio broadcasts and print ads, celebrities provided their personal accounts of hearing loss and told of how they were helped via hearing care professionals and hearing instruments. The people ranged from actors like Ed Asner, to political leaders like Ronald Reagan and Bill Clinton, to sports personalities like football player Mike Singletary and baseball player Curtis Pride, and medical experts like Former Surgeon

Joe Rizzo (right) and Sergei Kochkin (left) at an interview with sportscaster Marsh Nelson in Duluth, Minn, at the 1994 Run for Better Hearing held in coordination with Grandma's Marathon.

General C. Everett Koop.

Joe Rizzo (right) and BHI spokesperson and actress Nanette Fabray meet with President Reagan.

“Joe Rizzo was a pioneer in raising public awareness of hearing healthcare on a shoestring budget for the US market,” said Sergei Kochkin, PhD, a BHI Board Member who worked with Rizzo from 1992-1998 and eventually became BHI’s executive director from 2005–2012. “His basic PR model was to secure the endorsement of famous celebrities including movie stars, authors, physicians, and politicians (notably President Reagan) and to develop Public Service Announcements (PSAs) with tens of thousands of free interstitial television and radio ads, as well as high-quality free print PSAs in newspapers and magazines. In addition, he wrote concise scholarly consumer brochures which were distributed to millions of consumers. The impact of his 25-year PR campaign (1973-1998) around the themes ‘You should hear what you’re missing,’ and ‘You too can be helped medically, surgically, or like me with hearing aids’ is immeasurable.”

He also oversaw the creation of some of the first public service videos for the field. In 1983, BHI produced a hearing conservation film called Listen Up with Norm Crosby that also included several other well-known celebrities. About 10 years later, BHI updated this film with celebrities like Richard Dyshart of LA Law in a film titled, People vs Noise.

After running the 1994 Grandma's Marathon, Joe Rizzo chats with Sharon and Ross Roeser, PhD, who served as BHI president for many years.

“Whatever Joe Rizzo decided to do, whether it be running, music, or promoting better hearing awareness, he did it with passion and dedication. His contributions to promoting better hearing awareness for all those who need it are unmatched,” said Ross Roeser, PhD, who served as BHI president for many years and is now professor and executive director emeritus of the Callier Center for Communication Disorders at the University of Texas Dallas (UTD).

Rizzo graduated summa cum laude from Temple University, with a BS degree in Communications. Prior to leading BHI, he worked in journalism, including stints as a correspondent for the Paris edition of the New York Herald Tribune and the European edition of Stars and Stripes, as well as a reporter for the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin. Following retirement, he served four years as CEO of Orlando's Festival of Orchestras, concert presenter of the world's top orchestras. He also served on Central Florida boards of Habitat for Humanity, the YMCA, the Alzheimer Resource Center, and served as President of the University Club of Winter Park.

He is survived by his wife of over 61 years, Nita Marie. His oldest son, Joe Carl passed away in September. His son, Michael Sean, lives with his mother in Winter Park. He is also survived by two grandsons, Michael and Matthew. There will be a Celebration of Life service held in March at the University Club of Winter Park. In lieu of flowers, please make donations to the Winter Park Playhouse.

The Hearing Review thanks David Kirkwood, former editor of The Hearing Journal, for alerting us to Joe's passing, as well as Sergei Kochkin and Ross Roeser for their comments. This tribute incorporates parts of the obituary published in the Orlando Sentinel (February 26, 2019).

Reprinted with permission from The Hearing Review, March 2020.