It's the dog days of summer and I just left Rogers Centre after watching my beloved Yankees defeat the Blue Jays. However, even with the loss, I would argue the 40,000-plus Blue Jay fans still had an amazing time, as the atmosphere was incredible. It was simply the best sporting experience of my life. Repeatedly, I had to remind myself it was August 14th, the playoffs are over six-weeks away, yet Rogers Centre was electric. What truly caught my attention was the noise the fans made in the 8th and 9th innings. I have never been in a louder arena. The fans in the sold-out stadium were on their feet and Rogers Centre was quite possibly the loudest it has ever been (yes I know about the World Series championships). With all that noise, I thought my submissions would provide you some blogs related to music and noise; Happy Reading!
