

Reducing the Risk of Hearing Disorders among Musicians

Published July 9th, 2015

The National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health

NIOSH has just come out with a readable document about musicians and some useful strategies to minimize the effects of high sound levels from music. Courtesy of our friends at NIOSH, we are pleased to reprint the document here in this issue's Noisy Notes. Please click here to read the document.